Medibio Technology Honored with Two Presentations at Mayo Clinic Convergence Neuroscience 2018

Sydney, Australia and Minneapolis, MN USA – 8 October 2018: Medibio Limited (MEB or the Company)(ASX: MEB)(OTCQB: MDBIF), a mental health technology company, is happy to announce that two clinical abstracts by Dr. Archie Defillo et al. have been accepted for presentation as part of the Mayo Clinic Convergence Neuroscience 2018 Course. Both presentations are based on the recently completed DX04 clinical study.

Dr. Archie Defillo, Chief Medical Officer at Medibio, will share the following abstract presentations during the event to be held on November 8-10, 2018:

1. A Machine Learning Based Approach to Identify Heart Rate Variability Patterns Serving as a Diagnostic Aid for Major Depressive Episode.
2. A Novel Technology in Mental Health Variations in Cardio-Autonomic Function Used as Diagnostic Support for Major Depressive Episode.

Physicians and nurses attending the conference receive continuing medical education credit from the American Medical Association and the American Nurses Credentialing Center. The conference calls for groups within the biomedical, life sciences, physical science, engineering, and other fields to come together to solve unmet health needs. The goal is to bring together various scientists with the aim of discovery of education gaps and the potential for creative collaboration in shared problem solving.

“We are extremely proud of our clinical team and Scientific Advisory Board for their efforts in the significant research accepted for presentation at Mayo Clinic Convergence Neuroscience 2018,” says Brian Mower, Interim Chief Executive Officer at Medibio. “This honor further validates our scientific research, as we continue our work solving unmet health needs with objective solutions to mental health.”
